360 - Wounded Warrior WWII multi signed print 36x30 inch mounted and framed includes artist Richard Taylor and veterans Captain Clinton D Burdick , Colonel Steve Pisanos, Colonel Bud Anderson, Colonel Art Fiedler, Captain James Brooks, First Lieutenant Harry Seip and Lieutenant Colonel Clyde East. Limited edition 70/150. Like many other missions they had undertaken in the summer of 1944, this one had been particularly cold, tough and dangerous for pilot Harry Seip and the crew of B17G Silver Meteor. The First Lieutenant and his men had set out on that morning, 11 July 1944, from a peaceful Framlingham, on another arduous mission to Munich. With their bomb load dropped the crew headed for home, but the battle-scarred Fortress had been hit more than once, leaving the inner port engine shot out and Silver Meteor had steadily dropped behind the fast-disappearing bomber stream. Things were not looking good for Harry and his crew as the Luftwaffe fighters circled like sharks, closing in for an easy kill. Luckily the enemy pilots were not the only ones that had spotted the ailing Fortress. The P-51s of two of the best Aces in the Eighth Air Force - 'Bud' Anderson and 'Kit' Carson - had also seen the danger and came tearing out of the blue sky into the action. Within minutes the German pilots had fled and the crew of Silver Meteor could breathe a sigh of relief. With these two legendary Aces guiding them home, Harry and his men would survive to fight another day. Good condition Est. £80.00 - 90
361 - The Guardian WWII multi signed print 38x30 inch overall mounted and framed Victory Remarque edition 8/15 signatures include 379th BG veteran Hugh McGinty, Luftwaffe Bf 109 pilot Gernot Heinrichsdorff, Pilots Clayton Nattier, Don Carlson, and Newt Moy, B-17 gunner Mitch Mischler plus two distinguished 8th Air Force signers from the Main Edition. The German fighter pilot was taking a great risk. He had seen the faces of the wounded crewmen and decided to spare the damaged B-17 and more-to escort the plane out of Germany. If a civilian or soldier on the ground reported him, the fighter pilot would face a firing squad. In the eyes of his country during war, he was a traitor. But to the defenceless American crew, he was their guardian. Now, they had hopes of reaching England again, thanks to the mysterious German ace who held his fire. One day, the crew would know his name-Franz Stigler. In 1990, they'd invite Franz to their bomb group reunion where they'd introduce their families to the man who gave them the greatest of gifts-the chance to live. Good condition Est. £200.00 - 220

365 - Skipper Home at Last WWII multi signed 30x23 framed print signed in pencil by the artist Robert Taylor, General J. KEMP MACLAUGHLIN, Captain ROBERT SHOENS, Lieutenant Colonel ROBERT KLEYLA and Lieutenant Colonel RALPH NUTTER. There is a brief moment of calm as B-17 'Skipper' of the 367th Squadron, 306th Bomb Group returns to base at Thurleigh in East Anglia after another gruelling daytime mission over occupied Europe, January 1945. One of the longest serving Flying Fortresses of the war, 'Skipper' completed over 100 combat missions despite suffering from battle damage in late 1944. Robert's superb graphite edition acts as a lasting tribute to the brave aircrew of the USAAF who flew the mighty B-17 in combat during WWII. Good condition Est. £30.00 - 40
366 - Bringing the Peacemaker Home WWII multi signed framed and mounted print 37x30 inch print limited edition 580/750 signatures include artist Robert Taylor, Colonel CLARENCE E 'BUD' ANDERSON, Lieutenant Colonel JAMES D FLETCHER, Colonel STEVE PISANOS and Lieutenant Colonel MARION H 'CURLY' HAVELAAR. On July 20th it was the turn of the 91st Bomb Group to attack an airfield near Leipzig, suspected of harbouring the new menace - the Luftwaffe's revolutionary Messerschmitt Me262 jet. As the formation spread out for the bomb run, the 401st squadron took the low position - the most vulnerable to fighter attack. Just as the crew of The Peacemaker steadied the ship to sight the target, the squadron was set upon by Focke-Wulf 190s. The formation leader was set on fire wingtip to wingtip, almost colliding with Peacemaker as the stricken aircraft slid into the void below. At that moment, cannon shells ripped into Peacemaker as a Fw190 flashed past within 200 feet, its guns blazing. Hit in the wing and tail, the bucking B-17 began to slip below the rest of the formation. She was a long way from home. Robert Taylor's dramatic portrayal picks up the story as the injured bird limps towards the sanctuary of the English coast. That she has gotten this far is a miracle, due in no small part to the close attentions of escorting P-51B Mustangs of the 361st Fighter Group. To keep her flying, the crew jettisoning everything that can be safely bundled out of the aircraft. The front hatch is open and bombardier Marion Havelaar has reluctantly despatched his 20lb bomb sight to the ocean below - for him, an act of total sacrilege. The Peacemaker made it back to Bassingbourne that day; eight others did not. Good condition Est. £100.00 - 104
367 - Gathering of Eagles WWII multi signed 37x30 inch framed and mounted print Artist proof 26/50 signatures include artist Robert Taylor, Generalleutnant GÜNTHER RALL KC WITH OAK LEAVES AND SWORDS, Generalleutnant WALTER KRUPINSKI KC WITH OAK LEAVES, Colonel JAMES GOODSON, Colonel HUB ZEMKE, Group Captain PETER TOWNSEND CVO DSO DFC*, Wing Commander GEOFFREY PAGE DSO OBE DFC* and Generalleutnant ADOLF GALLAND KC WITH OAK LEAVES SWORDS AND DIAMONDS. B-17 bombers of the Mighty Eighth return from a mission over Germany, escorted by P51 Mustangs of the USAAF and RAF Spitfires. Having endured all the flak thrown at them by the ground defences, the courageous and determined crews now have even more to contend with as they face attacks by Luftwaffe Fw190 pilots. Good condition Est. £200.00 - 210

375 - Heaven Can Wait by Nicolas Trudgian print.  B-17 Fortresses of the Bloody Hundredth- the Eighth Air Forces 100th Bomb Group - return to Thorpe Abbotts following a raid on enemy oil refineries, September 11, 1944. Nicolas Trudgian moving tribute to the Bloody Hundredth shows the imaginatively named B-17, Heaven Can Wait, on final approach to Thorpe Abbotts after the intense battle on September 11, 1944. Skilfully piloted by Harry Hempy, the seriously damaged B-17G has struggled 500 miles home on two engines to make it back to England. They lost their tail gunner that fateful day. Below the descending bomber stream, an agricultural traction engine peacefully ploughs the wheat stubble in preparation for next year's vital crop, the farm workers oblivious to the unimaginable traumas so recently experienced by the crews of the returning B-17 Fortresses. Signed by four pilots and crew who flew with the 100th Bomb Group in Europe during World War II. Good condition Est. £60.00 - 70
376 - Skipper comes homes colour print by Robert Taylor.  Mounted and framed to approx size 30x24inch. KINCHELOE, Flight Lieutenant DON NIELSEN, Captain ROBERT PARIS. Good condition Est. £80.00 - 90
377 - Ace  of Diamonds by Nicholas Trudgian colour print.  Mounted and framed to approx size 30x24inch. From the day they began their aerial campaign against Nazi Germany to the cessation of hostilities in 1945, the USAAF bomber crews plied their hazardous trade in broad daylight. This tactic may have enabled better sighting of targets, and possibly less danger of mid-air collisions, but the grievous penalty of flying daylight missions over enemy territory was the ever presence of enemy fighters. Though heavily armed, the heavy bombers of the American Eighth Air Force were no match against the fast, highly manoeuvrable Me109s, Fw190s and, late in the war, Me 262 jet fighters which the Luftwaffe sent up to intercept them. Without fighter escort they were sitting ducks, and inevitably paid a heavy price. Among others, one fighter group earned particular respect, gratitude, and praise from bomber crews for their escort tactics. The 356th FG stuck rigidly to the principle of tight bomber escort duty, their presence in tight formation with the bombers often being sufficient to deter enemy attack. Repeatedly passing up the opportunity to increase individual scores, the leadership determined it more important to bring the bombers home than claim another enemy fighter victory. As the air war progressed this philosophy brought about an unbreakable bond between heavy bomber crews and escort fighter pilots, and among those held in the highest esteem were the pilots of the 356th. Top scoring ace Donald J Strait, flying his P-51 D Mustang Jersey Jerk, together with pilots of the 356th Fighter Group, are seen in action against Luftwaffe Fw 190s while escorting B-17 bombers returning from a raid on German installations during the late winter of 1944. One minute all is orderly as the mighty bombers thunder their way homeward, the next minute enemy fighters are upon them and all hell breaks loose.  Signed by three of the top pilots from the 356th Fighter group. Good condition Est. £50.00 - 54
378 - Cabin in the sky print signed by the artist.  Numbered 25 of 500. Mounted and framed to approx size 24x30inch. Good condition Est. £30.00 - 34
379 - Ramrod - outward bound colour print.  During the winter of 1944 - '45, the skies over Germany would routinely be studded with literally thousands of allied aircraft on "RAMROD" missions, a term used by the USAAF for long-range strategic bomber strikes with fighter escorts, flown from their bases in England. Shown here is famed triple ace Clarence E. "Bud" Anderson, flying his P-51D Mustang "Old Crow", defending B-17s of the 100th Bomb Group. As leading ace of the 357th FG's 363rd squadron, Anderson achieved the remarkable record of 116 missions without ever being hit by enemy aircraft fire. Overall size: 36 x 25.5  Personally signed by ELEVEN P-51 Mustang Pilots! /Colonel CLARENCE E 'BUD' ANDERSON Colonel STEVE PISANOS Colonel ART FIEDLER Major URBAN DREW  Lieutenant Colonel ROBERT A. 387 - Little Friends WWII print 32x24 inch framed and mounted signed in pencil by the artist Robert Taylor, Lieutenant Colonel CLYDE B. EAST and Flight Lieutenant LEONARD L. SPIVEY. With machine gun turret positions in the nose, atop the fuselage, under the belly, in the tail, and with two side gunner positions, it was anticipated no hostile fighter would penetrate a B-17 defensive formation. The sheer mass of defensive fire from a group of B-17s flying in geometrically calculated boxes would be enough to see off any Luftwaffe fighter pilot brave enough to make an attack. But, at terrible cost, the B-17 crews quickly learned that their masters' theory didn't stand up when they met Messerschmit Me109 and Focke Wulf Fw190 pilots in mortal combat. With no escort fighters to worry about, the Luftwaffe fighters circled their prey, carefully chose their line of attack, and ripped into the American bombers from angles they were least able to defend. They were chopping the B-17s down seemingly at leisure. Good condition Est. £50.00 - 60
388 - The Belle Under Attack WWII 36x30 inch print framed and mounted signed in pencil by the artist Simon Attack and veteran Colonel Robert Morgan. The B-17 crews expected an unusually hot fighter reception and they were not to be disappointed! Simon Atack's outstanding new painting recreates a moment of intense drama as the 324th Bomb Squadron come under attack just short of the target. Memphis Belle skipper, Bob Morgan, holds his B-17 steady for his gunners, as an Fw-190 comes flashing through the formation. Good condition Est. £40.00 - 50
